Dedication

To every child who has ever wondered why Yahusha came.

May the Promise of Spring teach you that His love began long before you were born,
and that the Lamb who died and rose again did it to bring you into His forever family.

And to the parents who read these words aloud — may this story awaken your home to the beauty of His appointed times,
where every spring He whispers:
“Behold, I make all things new.”

After the long hush of winter,
the earth stretched and yawned.
Buds peeked from branches. A warm wind carried a whisper—
“It’s time to follow the Light.”

A shining Dove fluttered down.

“These are the days when Heaven first began to shine upon the earth,” he said. “Follow the Light and you will see Yah’s promises come alive.”

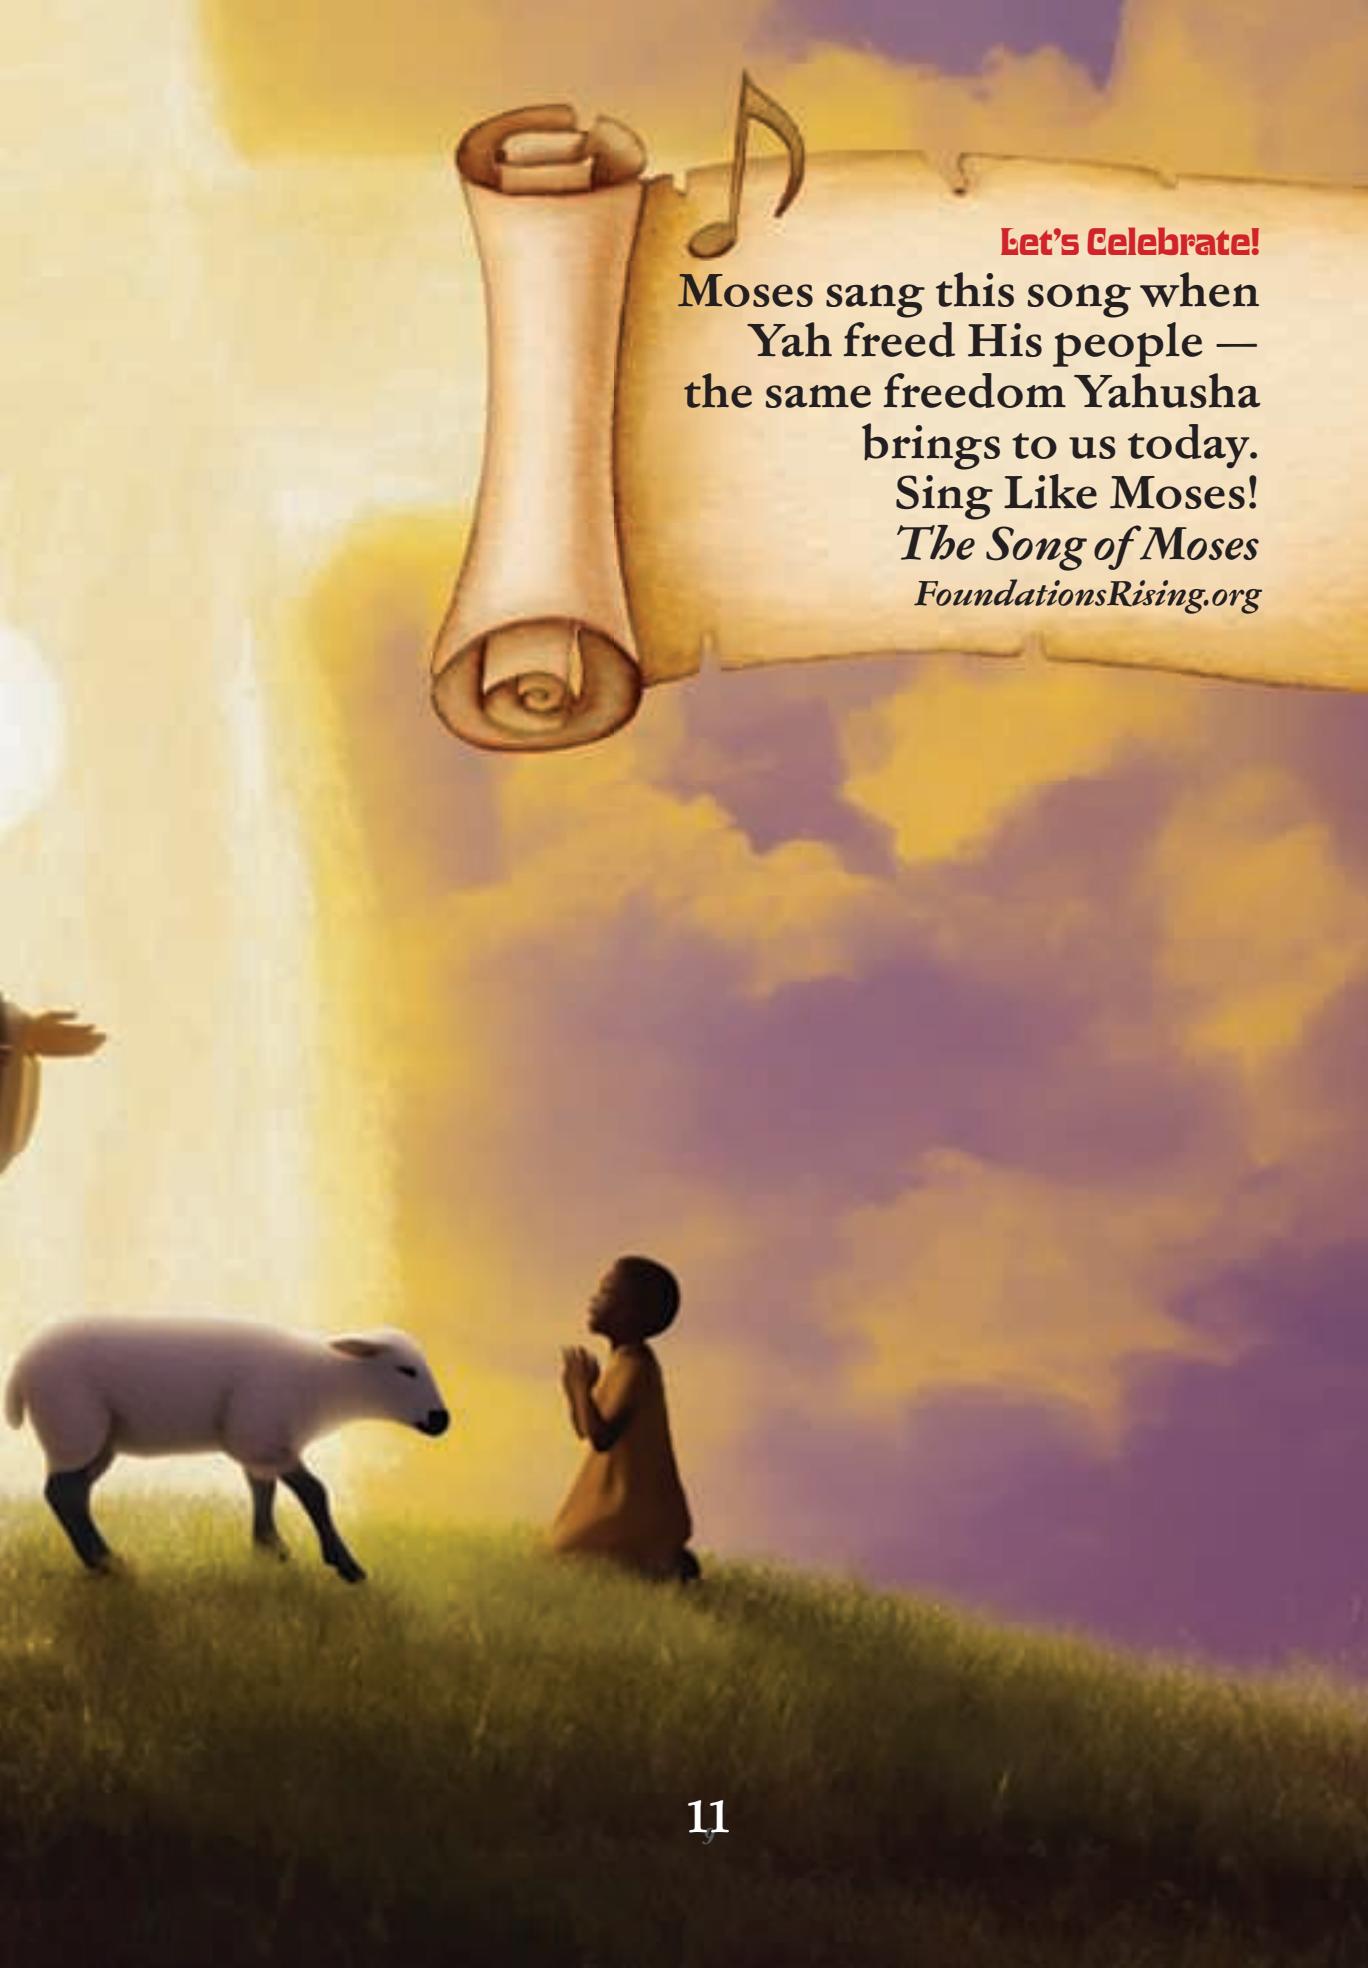

The Light led to a little house where a family brushed red paint on the door. “Long ago,” the Dove told them, “Yah’s people marked their doors with a lamb’s blood so death would pass over.” The children gasped as a gentle vision appeared—Yahusha sharing supper with His friends.

The Dove whispered,
“He became the Lamb—not to cover
sin, but to take it away forever.”
The doorway glowed like sunrise;
love filled the night.

Moses sang this song when Yah freed His people —
the same freedom Yahusha brings to us today.

Next morning the Light shone on women kneading flat bread.

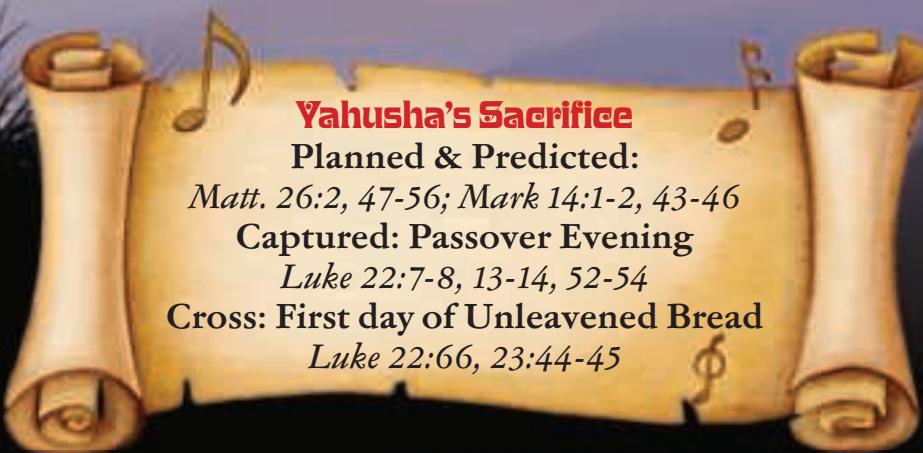

“Why no yeast?” asked little Eliyah.

“Yeast puffs up like pride,” the Dove smiled. “Yahusha was humble and pure.” In the glow, the children saw Isaac carrying wood long ago—just as Yahusha carried the cross.

The world grew quiet. The Light dimmed but did not fade.
The children waited,
remembering that Yahusha
rested in the tomb,
just as Yah rested after creation.
A holy pause of love.

Yahusha's Sacrifice

Planned & Predicted:

Matt. 26:2, 47-56; Mark 14:1-2, 43-46

Captured: Passover Evening

Luke 22:7-8, 13-14, 52-54

Cross: First day of Unleavened Bread

Luke 22:66, 23:44-45

A soft-focus background illustration shows a young boy with brown hair, seen from behind, looking out over a garden. In the center of the garden is a large, dark, rounded stone structure, possibly a tombstone. A small white dove is perched on the edge of the stone. The garden is filled with various flowers and plants, and a bright sun is visible in the upper left corner, casting a warm glow.

On the third morning, light burst over a garden!

Flowers opened. Birds sang louder than ever.

Yahusha stood alive, brighter than the sun.

“He is the First Fruit!” cried the Dove. “Because He lives, we will live too.”

But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept.

1 Cor. 15:20

Trees budded with every kind of fruit.
The children gathered baskets and danced through the blossoms.
“Each thankful heart is part of His harvest,” said the Dove.

The Dove lifted his wings. Light poured behind the children and made long shadows on the ground. “Do you see?” he said. “A shadow shows what is real when light shines on it.

These Feasts are shadows of Heaven—the Light reveals what they mean.” The Dove lifted his wings. Light poured behind the children and made long shadows on the ground.

“Do you see?” he said. “A shadow shows what is real when light shines on it.

These Feasts are shadows of Heaven—the Light reveals what they mean.”

Heb. 8:5, 10:1, 9:11 | Col. 2: 16-17

The children lifted their voices:

“Thank You, Yahuah,
for Your Lamb,
for bread that is true,
for life made new!”

The Light swirled around them like music.

The Dove rose into the bright sky.

“This is only the beginning,” he said. “The next Feast will bring the Fire of Heaven.”

The path stretched onward toward the horizon—still glowing.

Shadow and Light

When light shines on something real, it makes a shadow.

Yah's Feasts are like that—shadows of His real plans in Heaven.
